MODERN SAVAGE

Confidential / BGV Internal

70 Founder-Led Scripts

Bear Grylls to camera — April 2026 — Complete collection across three batches

70	30	30	10
Total scripts	Ad scripts	Conversational	Family-to-family

BATCH

All 70 | Ad Scripts (1-30) | Conversational (31-60) | Family-to-Family (61-70)

Showing 70 scripts

TOPIC

Family | Kids | Trust | Education | Replace the Shelf | Real Food | Gut Health | Founder | Personal | Honest Talk | Faith

Batch 1: Ad Scripts

Structured for paid media. Hook, problem, turn, proof, close. These have visible ad architecture underneath but should still feel like Bear talking, not performing.

01 / 70

Proof, Not Promises | Replace the Shelf

The Shelf Clear-Out

Bear stands in front of a kitchen counter covered in supplement bottles. Casual, direct.

Right. Look at this.

This is what my supplement shelf used to look like. Collagen over here. Probiotic there. Greens powder. Multivitamin. Fish oil. A protein powder that tasted like cardboard.

Eight products. None of them designed to work together. No idea if half of them were actually doing anything.

So me and my son Jesse sat down and asked a simple question: what if we just built the one thing that replaces all of this?

That's Modern Savage. One scoop. Real food. Organs, protein, gut health, antioxidants. Everything your body actually recognises.

`[Sweeps bottles aside. Places one bag of Modern Savage on the counter.]`

One bag. Done. No guesswork. No shelf full of maybes.

This is ours. Not a partnership. Not an endorsement. Built by our family, for yours.

modernsavage.shop

`~35 sec  Hook: visual shelf clutter`

02 / 70

Proof, Not Promises Founder story

This Isn't a Collab

Bear to camera. Kitchen or home office. Relaxed, eye-level.

I've done partnerships. I've put my name on things other people have made. And some of those have been great.

But I always had this itch. This feeling of: what would I actually build if I could make the one product I wanted for my own family?

So I stepped away from all supplement partnerships. Every single one.

And me and Jesse built Modern Savage from scratch. Our formula. Our team of nutritionists. Our call on every ingredient.

No one telling us to cut corners. No one asking us to make it cheaper. No compromises.

Modern by design. Savage by nature.

This is the product I actually use. Every single day. That's the whole pitch.

modernsavage.shop

~30 sec Hook: ownership authenticity

03 / 70

Real Food, Not Lab Food Ancestral

What Your Great-Grandmother Knew

Bear outdoors or in a rustic kitchen. Warm, conversational.

Your great-grandmother didn't have a supplement shelf. She didn't need one.

She ate the whole animal. Liver for iron and B12. Heart for CoQ10. Kidney for selenium. That was just dinner.

Somewhere along the way, we stopped eating like that. We replaced real food with synthetic tablets made in a lab and hoped our bodies wouldn't notice.

They noticed.

Modern Savage puts that nutrition back. Six organs, grass-fed, in a single daily scoop. Your body recognises every ingredient because it was designed to run on this stuff.

We didn't invent anything. We just remembered what works.

modernsavage.shop

~30 sec Hook: ancestral wisdom

04 / 70

The Family Table Provide and Protect

The Gummy Vitamin Truth

Bear at a kitchen table. Holds up a gummy vitamin bottle, reads the back.

Can I be honest about something?

I used to give my kids gummy vitamins. I thought I was doing the right thing. Then I actually read the back of the bottle.

Sugar. Glucose syrup. Synthetic colours. And the actual vitamins? Synthetic forms the body barely absorbs.

That's not nutrition. That's sweets in a health-food wrapper.

So when we built Modern Savage, the Kids Blend was non-negotiable. Real organ nutrition, colostrum for gut and immune health, a prebiotic and probiotic stack. One scoop. Nothing synthetic.

Same philosophy as the adult product. Just built for smaller bodies.

Because our kids deserve the real thing too.

modernsavage.shop

~35 sec Hook: parental guilt turned to action

05 / 70

Replace the Shelf Gut Health

The "I'm Fine" Lie

Bear walking outdoors. Casual, no set-up. Phone-style footage.

You know what I hear more than anything? "I'm fine."

Fine is not a standard. Fine is what we say when we've forgotten what good actually feels like.

The tiredness. The brain fog. The energy that disappears at 2pm every day. We've accepted that as normal.

It's not normal. It's a sign your body is running on the wrong fuel.

Modern Savage has a full gut health stack built in. Prebiotics, probiotics, two billion CFU. Alongside the organ blend that gives your body the micronutrients it's been missing.

Most people who try it say the same thing: "I didn't know I could feel this different."

That's not marketing. That's real food doing what real food does.

modernsavage.shop

`~30 sec  Hook: challenging "fine" as a standard`

06 / 70

Replace the Shelf | Practical / cost

The Maths

Bear at a table with a notepad. Simple, direct, no frills.

Let me do some quick maths for you.

A decent protein powder: thirty quid a month. Collagen: another twenty-five. A good probiotic: twenty. Greens powder: thirty-five. Multivitamin: fifteen.

Maybe a fish oil on top.

That's over a hundred a month. Six different products. Six different brands. No idea if any of them are working together.

Modern Savage: one bag. One scoop. Protein, organs, gut health, antioxidants, superfoods. Everything in one place.

And it costs less than what most people are already spending on the stuff that isn't working.

Sometimes the simplest answer is actually the best one.

modernsavage.shop

~30 sec Hook: cost comparison logic

07 / 70

Real Food, Not Lab Food Freedom from Broken Systems

Read the Label

Bear holding two supplement bottles. One Modern Savage, one generic.

Flip over any supplement bottle and you'll see two things that should worry you.

"Proprietary blend." That means they won't tell you how much of each ingredient is in it.

And a list of compounds your body has never seen in nature. Synthesised in a lab, compressed into a tablet, sold as health.

Now look at ours.

[Turns the Modern Savage bag around.]

Every ingredient listed. Every dose declared. Grass-fed bovine liver, heart, spleen, kidney, lung, bison liver. Collagen peptides. Organic baobab. Acerola cherry.

You can read every word and know exactly what it is. Because it's food. Real food.

That's the standard we set. Full transparency. No hiding.

modernsavage.shop

~35 sec Hook: label comparison

08 / 70

One Family, One Brand Warm / personal

The Morning Routine

Bear in his kitchen, morning light. Making two scoops. Warm, unhurried.

This is what our morning looks like.

One scoop of the Adult Blend for me. One scoop of the Kids Blend for the little ones. Same counter. Same philosophy. Same trust in what's inside.

That was the whole point when we built this. One brand for the whole family. One set of ingredients you can believe in. One routine that takes about thirty seconds.

We didn't want to be the brand that sells to one person in the house. We wanted to be the brand the whole family reaches for.

Because health isn't an individual thing. It's a family thing.

Modern Savage. One family. One brand.

modernsavage.shop

~25 sec Hook: family morning ritual

09 / 70

Real Food, Not Lab Food Educational

The Organ Lesson

Bear to camera, close-up. Teaching mode but casual.

Quick lesson.

Liver is the single most nutrient-dense food on the planet. Retinol, B12, iron, folate. Nothing else comes close.

Heart is loaded with CoQ10, which your cells need for energy production.

Kidney gives you selenium and B12 in forms your body actually absorbs.

Spleen supports your immune system with peptides you can't get anywhere else.

Every culture on earth knew this. Every hunter, every tribe, every family that lived off the land: they ate the organs first. The muscle meat was secondary.

Modern Savage puts all six organs into one scoop. Grass-fed. Whole-food sourced. Your body knows exactly what to do with it.

We didn't reinvent nutrition. We just stopped ignoring what already worked.

modernsavage.shop

~35 sec Hook: rapid-fire organ education

10 / 70

Proof, Not Promises | Raw / honest

30 Years of Field Nutrition

Bear outdoors. Adventure setting if possible. Quiet, reflective.

I've been eating like this for thirty years.

Not because it was trendy. Not because someone wrote a book about it. Because when you're in the field, you eat what the land gives you. And what the land gives you is the whole animal.

Organs. Marrow. The bits most people throw away. Those are the bits that keep you going.

I didn't build Modern Savage because I saw a gap in the market. I built it because I'd been living this way for three decades and I wanted my family to have the same nutrition without having to eat raw liver in the jungle.

[Slight smile.]

One scoop. Everything I've learnt about nutrition in thirty years of doing this for real.

modernsavage.shop

~30 sec Hook: field credibility

11 / 70

The Family Table | Provide and Protect

For the Kids First

Bear seated, conversational. Talking about his family.

People assume we built the adult product first and then added a kids' version.

We didn't.

The Kids Blend was the reason this whole thing started. Because I looked at what was available for children and it was rubbish. Sugar-coated synthetics. Bright colours. Barely any actual nutrition.

My kids eat well. But even with good meals, there are gaps. And no parent should have to give their child something they don't fully trust.

So we built the Kids Blend with the same organ nutrition as the adult version, just at half the dose. Added colostrum for immune and gut development. Prebiotics and probiotics.

Real nutrition from day one. That's the standard.

modernsavage.shop

~30 sec Hook: kids came first

12 / 70

Replace the Shelf Simplicity

One Scoop, Done

Bear in kitchen. Quick, punchy. Mixing the product live on camera.

Watch this.

[Scoops powder into a glass. Stirs. Holds it up.]

That is ten grams of protein. Two and a half grams of organ nutrition from six different organs. Three and a half grams of prebiotic and probiotic blend. A full superfood antioxidant stack. Collagen. Marine algae. Organic honey.

One scoop. Thirty seconds. Done.

No twelve-capsule morning routine. No five different powders. No confusion.

This is what I have every single morning. This is what my family has. And honestly, it's the simplest health decision I've ever made.

modernsavage.shop

~20 sec Hook: live demo simplicity

13 / 70

Real Food, Not Lab Food Provocative

The Supplement Industry Is Lying to You

Bear to camera, direct. No smile. Straight talk.

The supplement industry is a hundred and eighty billion dollar machine. And most of it is built on ingredients your body doesn't recognise, in doses that don't do what the label claims, hidden behind the words "proprietary blend."

That's not health. That's marketing.

I got tired of it. So we built something different.

Modern Savage. Every ingredient from a whole-food source. Every dose on the label. No proprietary blends. No synthetic fillers. No hiding.

Grass-fed organs. Real protein. A gut health stack that actually works.

You deserve to know exactly what you're putting in your body. And your body deserves food it was built to run on.

modernsavage.shop

~30 sec Hook: industry exposé

14 / 70

Proof, Not Promises | Family Nutrition

Me and Jesse

Bear and Jesse together if possible. Otherwise Bear talking about building with his son.

This brand was built by me and my son Jesse. Nobody else.

Every decision. Every ingredient. Every conversation with our nutritionists. We were both in the room.

Jesse runs the business side. I bring thirty years of field nutrition. Between us, we built the product we both wanted for our families.

And that's the thing: this isn't a celebrity brand with my face on it. This is a family business. We own 100% of it. Every call is ours.

When you buy Modern Savage, you're buying from a family that uses it every morning. That's not a tagline. That's the truth.

modernsavage.shop

~25 sec Hook: father-son founder story

15 / 70

Replace the Shelf | Gut Health

Your Gut Is Running the Show

Bear walking. Casual, educational. Think voice note energy.

Your gut is connected to everything. Energy, sleep, mood, immunity, skin. If your gut isn't working, nothing is working properly.

And most people's guts are in trouble. Processed food. Stress. Antibiotics. Years of synthetic supplements that the body treats as foreign objects.

That's why we built a full gut health stack into Modern Savage. Agave inulin as a prebiotic. Organic baobab. Two billion CFU of LactoSpore probiotics.

Not a separate bottle. Not an add-on. Built in. Because gut health shouldn't be optional.

One scoop covers the organs, the protein, and the gut. Your body gets everything it needs in one hit.

modernsavage.shop

~25 sec Hook: gut as control centre

16 / 70

The Family Table Faith and Legacy

Stewardship

Bear at home. Quiet, reflective. End-of-day energy.

I believe we've been given these bodies to look after. And I believe we've been given our families to protect.

That means feeding them properly. Not with whatever is cheapest or most convenient, but with real nutrition that does what it's supposed to do.

Modern Savage was born out of that conviction. It's not just a product. It's how our family eats. It's the standard we've set for ourselves.

Grass-fed organs. Whole-food sourced. No compromises. For us and for our kids.

What you feed your family says something about what you believe. We believe in doing it right.

modernsavage.shop

~25 sec Hook: values-driven nutrition

17 / 70

Real Food, Not Lab Food | Quick / punchy

Synthetic vs Real

Bear to camera. Fast-paced, almost like a challenge.

Your multivitamin was made in a lab. Modern Savage was made by a cow.

[Beat.]

I know which one your body recognises.

The difference between synthetic and whole-food nutrition is bioavailability. Your body absorbs nutrients from real food at a completely different rate than it absorbs synthetic compounds.

Organ meats are the most bioavailable source of micronutrients that exist. Retinol from liver. CoQ10 from heart. Selenium from kidney. In forms your body was literally designed to use.

That's what's in every scoop. Real food, not lab food.

modernsavage.shop

~20 sec Hook: blunt comparison

18 / 70

Proof, Not Promises | Whole Food Simplicity

No Compromises

Bear in a simple setting. Direct eye contact. Founder conviction.

When you own 100% of a brand, you make different decisions.

No one told us to use cheaper ingredients. No investor said "cut the organ dose in half to save money." No board meeting decided that synthetic would do.

Every ingredient in Modern Savage is there because we chose it. Every dose is what our nutritionists recommended, not what the accountant approved.

Quality is non-negotiable. That's easy to say. It's harder when it's your money on the line.

But if I'm feeding this to my kids, it has to be right. There's no version of this where we cut corners.

Modern Savage. No compromises.

modernsavage.shop

~25 sec Hook: ownership = quality control

19 / 70

One Family, One Brand Provide and Protect

The Same Standard

Bear holding both bags, one in each hand. Warm.

[Holds up both bags.]

Same sourcing. Same grass-fed organs. Same manufacturing standards. Same transparency.

The only difference? The Kids Blend has half the organ dose, added colostrum, and slightly lower vitamin levels. Because children need different amounts. But they don't need different quality.

That's what frustrated me about the children's supplement market. It's treated as an afterthought. Lower standards. More fillers. More sugar.

We built the Kids Blend to the same standard as the Adult Blend. Because my kids eat from the same kitchen. They should supplement from the same philosophy.

One family. One brand. Same trust in both.

modernsavage.shop

~25 sec Hook: two bags, one standard

20 / 70

Real Food, Not Lab Food Gut Health

What's Actually in This

Bear holding the bag, reading from it. Almost like unboxing energy.

Let me just tell you what's in this. No marketing. Just the ingredients.

Ten grams of primal protein from collagen peptides and beef protein isolate. Grass-fed.

Two and a half grams of organ blend. Liver, heart, spleen, kidney, lung, and bison liver.

Three and a half grams of prebiotic and probiotic blend. Agave inulin, baobab, two billion CFU.

One and a quarter grams of superfood nutrients. Marine algae, broccoli, spinach, kale, fermented vitamin K2.

One gram of superfruit antioxidants. Date, goji, acai, blueberry, maqui.

Flavoured with organic honey and vanilla bean.

That's it. That's the whole label. Nothing hidden. Nothing synthetic. Nothing you can't pronounce.

modernsavage.shop

~35 sec Hook: full ingredient read-through

21 / 70

Proof, Not Promises Challenger energy

What Ownership Means

Bear to camera. Warm. Founder pride, not challenger energy.

There's a big difference between putting your name on something and building something.

I've worked with great brands over the years. Learnt a lot. But with Modern Savage, I wanted to go further. I wanted to be the one making the decisions. Choosing the ingredients. Sitting in the meetings with the nutritionists. Testing the formula on my own family before anyone else saw it.

Me and Jesse own 100% of this. There's no parent company. No licensing partner. No one else's logo on the back.

When I say I trust this product, it's because I built it. I know what's in it because I chose what's in it.

That's what ownership means to me. And it's why this feels different from anything I've done before.

modernsavage.shop

~30 sec Hook: ownership pride

22 / 70

Replace the Shelf Relatable

The 12-Capsule Morning

Bear miming taking capsule after capsule. Slightly comedic.

Some people's morning routine is: wake up, open six bottles, swallow twelve capsules, wonder if any of it is working, then get on with the day.

```
[Mimes swallowing capsule after capsule.]
```

I did that for years. It's miserable. And the worst part? Half those products overlap and the other half your body barely absorbs.

Modern Savage is one scoop in a glass. Stir it. Drink it. You've just taken your protein, your organ nutrition, your gut health stack, and your antioxidants.

Thirty seconds. No capsule fatigue. No guessing.

The simplest change you'll make this year. And probably the most effective.

modernsavage.shop

```
~25 sec  Hook: capsule fatigue comedy
```

23 / 70

The Family Table | Educational

Colostrum

Bear to camera. Parent-to-parent. Informative.

You know what colostrum is?

It's the first milk a mother produces. It's packed with antibodies, growth factors, and immune compounds. It's nature's way of giving a newborn the strongest possible start.

We put it in the Kids Blend.

Because the same immune support that protects a newborn can support a growing child's gut health, immune system, and overall development.

Grass-fed bovine colostrum. Alongside the organ blend and the probiotic stack.

One scoop gives your child what most children's supplements don't even come close to.

Quick note: it does contain milk, so check for allergies. Full allergen declaration on the label.

modernsavage.shop

~25 sec Hook: colostrum education for parents

24 / 70

Proof, Not Promises Real Ingredients

Why Powder, Not Capsules

Bear holding the bag. Explaining a deliberate choice.

People ask why we made a powder and not capsules.

Simple. Capsules limit what you can fit in a serving. You'd need about fifteen capsules to get what we put in one scoop.

Powder lets us give you ten grams of protein, a full organ blend, and a complete gut health stack in one hit. You can't do that in a capsule. Not at these doses.

Plus, you can mix it into a smoothie, into water, however you like. The kids have theirs with a bit of milk. Takes thirty seconds.

We wanted the format that lets us give you the most nutrition in the simplest way. Powder wins. Every time.

modernsavage.shop

~25 sec Hook: format justification

25 / 70

One Family, One Brand Legacy

Generational Health

Bear outdoors. Thoughtful, slower pace.

I think a lot about what we pass on.

Not money. Not stuff. But health. Habits. The standards your kids grow up with and carry into their own families.

If my children grow up eating real food, understanding what their bodies need, and knowing that organs are the most powerful nutrition on earth, that's a legacy worth building.

Modern Savage isn't a quick fix. It's a family standard. The Adult Blend for us, the Kids Blend for them. The same nutrition, the same philosophy, passed down.

We're not building a supplement brand. We're building something our grandkids will use.

modernsavage.shop

~25 sec Hook: legacy thinking

26 / 70

Real Food, Not Lab Food Quick hit

Liver Is King

Bear to camera. 15-second format. Fast, factual.

Gram for gram, liver is the most nutrient-dense food on the planet.

More vitamin A than carrots. More B12 than any other food. More bioavailable iron than spinach.

Your ancestors ate it first. Every culture. Every continent. For thousands of years.

Then we stopped. And we replaced it with a synthetic tablet.

Modern Savage puts it back. Grass-fed bovine liver. In every single scoop.

modernsavage.shop

~15 sec Hook: liver as the king of nutrition

27 / 70

Replace the Shelf Testimonial prompt

What People Keep Telling Us

Bear to camera. Conversational, like sharing feedback he's received.

The thing people keep telling us, and I mean this is the number one piece of feedback, is: "I didn't know I could feel this different."

Not "wow, great product." Not "nice packaging." But: "My energy is different. My gut feels different. I'm sleeping better. My skin has changed."

And that's not because Modern Savage is magic. It's because most people have been running on the wrong fuel for years. And when you finally give your body what it was designed to eat, it responds.

Six organs. A full gut health stack. Real protein. One scoop.

Your body knows what to do with this. Just give it the chance.

modernsavage.shop

~25 sec Hook: real feedback

28 / 70

Proof, Not Promises Direct / punchy

The Pitch

Bear to camera. Fast. No filler. 15-second cut.

This is Modern Savage.

One scoop. Six organs. Full gut health stack. Real protein. Superfood antioxidants.

No synthetics. No fillers. No proprietary blends.

100% owned by my family. 100% what we use.

Making family health the powerhouse it should be.

modernsavage.shop

~12 sec Hook: rapid-fire brand summary

29 / 70

Real Food, Not Lab Food Gut Health

Women and Organ Nutrition

Bear to camera. Thoughtful, inclusive. Breaking the "bro supplement" frame.

Organ nutrition is not a men's thing. And I want to be clear about that because most brands in this space market almost exclusively to blokes.

Liver is one of the richest sources of bioavailable iron on earth. That matters for women, especially during menstruation and pregnancy.

Heart provides CoQ10 which supports energy at the cellular level. Kidney offers selenium which plays a role in thyroid function.

These are nutrients women need. In forms the body actually absorbs.

Modern Savage was built for families. That means everyone. Mums, dads, kids. One brand, one philosophy.

This isn't a biohacking product for men in their thirties. It's real nutrition for real households.

modernsavage.shop

~30 sec Hook: breaking the bro-supplement frame

30 / 70

Proof, Not Promises Family / Legacy

Why We Built This

Bear at home, end of day. Quiet. The most personal script.

People ask me why I built a supplement brand. As if there aren't enough of them already.

And the honest answer is: there are too many. And almost none of them are what they claim to be.

I wanted one product I could trust completely. For me, for Shara, for the kids. One thing on the counter every morning that I know is doing exactly what it should.

So me and Jesse built it. We picked the team. We chose every ingredient. We tested it on ourselves first. And we put our name on it. Not as endorsers. As owners.

Modern Savage is our family feeding yours.

That's it. That's the whole story.

modernsavage.shop

~30 sec Hook: the honest "why"

Batch 2: Conversational

Voice-note energy. Walking and talking. Mid-thought. The product appears naturally because it is part of Bear's life. Film handheld, phone-quality, no lighting rig. The rawer the better.

---

31 / 70

Honest Talk Founder

The Honest Answer

Bear walking outside. Phone-filmed. Windbreaker on. Looks like he just decided to record this.

Someone asked me the other day why I'm building a supplement brand when there are already thousands of them.

And the honest answer is: because I couldn't find one I trusted.

I've been eating organ meats in the field for thirty years. Liver, heart, kidney. The stuff most people won't touch. And it's the stuff that kept me going when nothing else did.

I wanted that nutrition for my family without having to convince my kids to eat raw liver. So me and Jesse built it ourselves.

That's genuinely it. There's no bigger strategy. I just wanted something real for the people I love most.

~25 sec Voice note energy

32 / 70

Personal Honest Talk

The Next Step

Bear sitting somewhere quiet. Close-up. Thoughtful.

I've been lucky to work with some brilliant brands over the years. And I've learnt a lot from every one of those partnerships.

But there was always this thing in the back of my mind: what would I build if it was completely mine? If I chose every ingredient, picked the team, made every call?

That's Modern Savage. It's the thing I've been building towards without realising it. All those years of partnerships taught me what matters. What to prioritise. What not to compromise on.

This is me and Jesse taking everything we've learnt and putting it into something we own completely. Every decision is ours. Every ingredient is ours.

It's not a step away from anything. It's a step towards the thing I always wanted to make.

~30 sec Evolution / gratitude

33 / 70

Education

Why Organs

Bear at a table with a cup of tea. No product visible. Just talking.

When you look at how humans ate for most of history, one thing stands out: they ate the organs first.

Not the steak. Not the muscle meat. The organs. Because that's where all the good stuff is. Liver alone has more vitamin A, more B12, more bioavailable iron than almost anything else you can eat. Heart has CoQ10. Kidney has selenium.

We stopped eating organs maybe a hundred years ago. Which in the span of human history is nothing. And we replaced that nutrition with synthetic tablets.

I'm not saying everyone needs to go back to eating offal. I'm saying we should at least put those nutrients back into our diet. That's all Modern Savage does.

~30 sec Casual education

34 / 70

Kids Family

The Breakfast Argument

Bear in the kitchen. Morning. Casual. Feels unplanned.

Our mornings are chaos. Same as everyone else's. Shouting up the stairs, lost school shoes, arguments about breakfast.

But one thing that's just become part of the routine now is the scoop. I have mine, the kids have theirs. Takes thirty seconds. Nobody argues about it because it just goes in whatever they're having.

And I know that whatever else happens that morning, whatever they eat or don't eat at school, they've had the nutrition they need.

That's what I wanted when we built this. Something that fits into the mess of real family life. Not something that adds to it.

~25 sec Real family life

35 / 70

Honest Talk

I'm Not a Scientist

Bear sitting on a step or a wall outside. Relaxed. Sun on his face.

I want to be upfront about something. I'm not a scientist. I'm not a nutritionist. I'm not going to pretend I understand every biochemical pathway in the body.

What I do know is that for thirty years I've eaten the way humans ate for thousands of years before us. Whole food. Organ meats. What the land gives you.

And I've seen what it does. In myself. In the people I've worked with in the field.

So we found the best nutritionists we could, told them what we wanted, and let them build the formula. Then we tested it on ourselves.

That's the honest process. Not a lab, not a marketing brief. Just: what works, and how do we put it in a scoop.

~30 sec Vulnerability / credibility

36 / 70

Education

The Gut Thing

Bear walking his dog, or just walking. Phone footage. Talking mid-stride.

I've been reading a lot about gut health lately. And the more I read, the more I think we've all been looking at health from the wrong end.

We focus on what we eat. Which matters. But if your gut can't absorb it properly, it doesn't matter how clean your diet is.

That's why we put a full prebiotic and probiotic stack into Modern Savage. Not as an afterthought. It's three and a half grams of the blend. Two billion CFU.

Because the organs are incredible, but they work better when your gut is actually able to do its job.

The whole formula is designed to work together. That's the bit most supplement brands miss. They sell you individual ingredients. We built a system.

~30 sec Walking and learning

37 / 70

Founder Personal

Building with Jesse

Bear at home or in an office. Warm. Talking about his son.

One of the best parts of this whole thing has been building it with Jesse.

He runs the business. He's sharper than me on the detail. He challenges everything. And he's got this instinct for what's real and what's rubbish that I trust completely.

We argue. Course we do. He'll push back on something I want to include and half the time he's right. That's what you want in a business partner. Someone who doesn't just agree with you.

But the thing that matters most is that we both use it. Our families use it. Every decision we make, the first question is: would we give this to our kids?

If the answer's no, it doesn't go in.

~30 sec Father-son dynamic

38 / 70

Honest Talk Education

The Supplement Aisle

Bear talking to camera. Could be filmed in an actual shop aisle if possible.

Have you ever stood in the supplement aisle of a health food shop and just felt completely lost?

There are hundreds of products. They all say roughly the same thing. "Natural." "Clean." "Clinically proven." And they all cost thirty, forty quid. Multiply that by the five or six things you think you need and it's a fortune.

I've stood there. Picking things up, reading the backs, putting them down again. And you walk out either spending too much or buying nothing because the whole thing felt overwhelming.

That experience is basically why we built Modern Savage. One product. Everything in it. Read the label, understand every word, trust what's inside.

I just wanted to make the decision simple.

~30 sec Relatable frustration

39 / 70

Kids Family

What I Wish I'd Known Earlier

Bear sitting down. Reflective. Talking to parents.

If I could go back and tell myself one thing as a new dad, it would be: look at the back of the bottle.

I gave my kids gummy vitamins for years. Thought I was doing a good job. They liked them. They were brightly coloured. They came in bear shapes, which felt like fate.

[Small laugh.]

Then I actually read the ingredients. And it was mostly sugar, glucose syrup, citric acid, and synthetic compounds with names I couldn't pronounce.

The actual vitamins? Tiny amounts. In forms the body barely recognises.

I'm not trying to make anyone feel bad. I did the same thing. I'm just saying: if you're going to supplement your kids, look at what's actually in it. That's all.

~30 sec Parental hindsight

40 / 70

Personal

The Field

Bear outdoors. Adventure setting if available. Raw footage energy.

When you're in the field, you eat what keeps you alive. That's it.

And I learnt very early on that the bits of the animal most people throw away are the bits that keep you going the longest. Liver gives you energy that lasts. Heart keeps you strong. Marrow keeps you warm.

Indigenous communities all over the world know this. It's not new information. We just forgot it.

I've spent thirty years eating this way when it matters most. And I thought: why do I only eat like this when I'm in survival mode? Why isn't this how I eat at home, every day?

That's where Modern Savage came from. Not a business plan. Just a question I couldn't stop asking.

~30 sec Origin story, raw

41 / 70

Education

Bioavailability

Bear at a table. Cup of something. Teaching but casual, like explaining to a friend.

There's a word you'll hear a lot in nutrition: bioavailability. Sounds complicated. It's not.

It just means: how much of what you swallow does your body actually use?

And the answer, for most synthetic supplements, is: not much. Your body gets handed a compound it's never seen in nature and goes: I don't know what to do with this. And most of it passes straight through.

Whole-food nutrients are different. Your body recognises them because they're the same form it's been processing for thousands of years. The iron in liver is absorbed completely differently than iron from a tablet.

That's the whole argument for organ nutrition in one word. Bioavailability. Your body knows what to do with real food.

`~30 sec  Concept explained simply`

42 / 70

Honest Talk Founder

Earning Trust

Bear to camera. Quiet. No performance energy. Just thinking aloud.

Trust takes time. I know that.

You can't just launch a product and expect people to believe in it on day one. Doesn't matter whose name is on it.

So all we can do is be transparent. Show the label. Explain every ingredient. Tell you exactly how much of each thing is in the scoop and where it comes from.

We own it. We use it. Our kids use it. We chose every single ingredient and we'll tell you why we chose it.

That's the deal. No hype. No shortcuts. Just honesty and time.

And if people try it and it works for them, they'll tell someone. That's how real brands are built. Not with marketing. With trust.

~25 sec Building trust patiently

43 / 70

Family

Shara's Take

Bear at home. Talking naturally, like someone just asked him off camera.

Shara was sceptical at first. She is about most things I come home excited about.

[Slight smile.]

She said: "If you're going to do this, the kids' product has to be as good as the adult one. Not a watered-down version with a cartoon on the front."

And she was right. That's exactly what most brands do. They take the adult formula, halve everything, add some sugar to make it taste nice, and call it a kids' product.

The Kids Blend is built from scratch. Half the organ dose because that's what's appropriate. Added colostrum for immune and gut development. Proper prebiotic and probiotic levels.

Shara uses the Adult Blend now too, by the way. She just took longer to admit it.

~30 sec Family voice, Shara's challenge

44 / 70

Education

The Heart

Bear to camera. Short. Quick lesson energy.

Quick one on heart.

Not the emotional kind. The organ.

Bovine heart is one of the richest natural sources of CoQ10 on the planet. CoQ10 is what your mitochondria use to produce energy at the cellular level. It's the engine behind everything.

Your body makes less of it as you get older. Most people over thirty are running on declining levels without knowing it.

You can buy a CoQ10 supplement. Synthetic version, thirty quid a bottle. Or you can get it from the source that your body actually recognises.

We put heart in every scoop. Not because it sounds impressive. Because it does something real.

~20 sec Single organ spotlight

45 / 70

Honest Talk Personal

My Energy at 52

Bear outdoors, maybe post-exercise or mid-walk. Real setting.

People ask me how I still have the energy to do what I do. I'm fifty-two. I've broken my back, broken more bones than I can count, been through surgeries that should have slowed me down.

And the truth is, I don't have some secret. I sleep when I can. I move every day. And I eat real food.

The organ nutrition is a big part of that. It has been for decades. The only difference now is that it comes in a scoop instead of from whatever animal I've managed to catch.

[Pause.]

I'm not selling you energy. I'm just telling you what I do. And this is what I do.

~25 sec Personal testimony, quiet

46 / 70

Kids

Sugar in Children's Supplements

Bear at a table. Calm. Parent-to-parent.

I want to talk about sugar for a second.

The most popular children's vitamins in the UK contain between two and three grams of sugar per serving. That's per gummy. Most kids take two. Some take more because they taste like sweets. Because they basically are sweets.

We're giving children sugar, calling it a vitamin, and feeling good about it.

The Kids Blend has no added sugar. The sweetness comes from organic honey powder and vanilla. And the nutrition comes from actual food. Organs, colostrum, prebiotics, probiotics.

I'm not having a go at anyone. We did the same thing for years. I'm just saying: once you see it, you can't unsee it.

~25 sec Gentle exposé, no judgement

47 / 70

Honest Talk

What I'd Say to a Sceptic

Bear to camera. Direct but warm. Like answering a DM.

If you're sceptical about this, good. You should be. The supplement industry has earned your scepticism.

Every brand says they're different. Every brand says they're clean and natural and evidence-based. And most of them are hiding behind the words "proprietary blend," which is just a legal way of saying "we won't tell you how much of each ingredient is actually in here."

Modern Savage doesn't use proprietary blends. Every ingredient is listed. Every dose is declared. You can read the label and know exactly what you're getting.

That's not a marketing angle. It's just what transparency looks like. If a brand won't tell you what's in their product, ask yourself why.

~25 sec Addressing sceptics directly

48 / 70

Education

Spleen

Bear to camera. Slight smile. He knows this one's unusual.

Spleen.

Yeah, I know. It's not the sexiest ingredient on the list.

But spleen is packed with immune peptides that you genuinely cannot get from any other food source. It's been used in traditional nutrition across cultures for centuries specifically for immune support.

Most people have never eaten spleen. Most people have never even thought about it. But their great-great-grandparents almost certainly did.

We put it in Modern Savage because the science is there and because the historical use is there. Not everything in nutrition needs to sound appealing. Sometimes it just needs to work.

~20 sec Organ spotlight, humour

49 / 70

Founder Honest Talk

The Money Question

Bear to camera. Direct. No flinching from the question.

Alright, let's talk about price. Because seventy-nine dollars for a bag of powder sounds like a lot.

Until you add up what most people are already spending. A protein powder, a probiotic, a collagen, a greens supplement, maybe a multivitamin. That's easily over a hundred a month. Often more.

Modern Savage replaces all of that. One bag. Twenty-eight servings. Under three dollars a day.

But honestly, the real question isn't whether it's expensive. The real question is: what are you actually getting for your money? Because with most supplements, you're paying for marketing and packaging. With this, you're paying for ingredients.

Read the label. Compare it to whatever you're currently taking. That's all I'd ask.

~30 sec Addressing price head-on

50 / 70

Family Personal

The Packed Lunch

Bear in the kitchen. Morning energy. Real life happening around him.

I was making the kids' packed lunches the other morning and I had this moment where I thought: I care so much about what goes in these sandwiches, what fruit they've got, whether the yoghurt is any good. And then I hand them a synthetic gummy vitamin and don't think twice.

That's the gap, isn't it? We care about food but we don't apply the same standard to supplements. We just trust the packaging.

That's what changed for me. Once I started looking at supplements the same way I look at food, the whole category fell apart. And the answer was obvious: eat real food. Even if it comes in a scoop.

`~25 sec  Mundane moment, real insight`

51 / 70

Education

Powder vs Capsules

Bear holding the bag. Conversational. Answering a question someone clearly asked him.

A lot of organ supplement brands use capsules. And capsules are fine. But there's a limit to how much you can fit in one.

If you wanted to get everything that's in one scoop of Modern Savage from capsules, you'd be swallowing about fifteen of them. Every morning.

We chose powder because it lets us give you proper doses. Ten grams of protein. Two and a half grams of organs. Three and a half grams of gut health. Plus the superfoods and the antioxidants.

You can't fit that in a capsule. Not honestly.

Mix it in water, milk, a smoothie, whatever. Thirty seconds. And you've actually got the doses that make a difference, not just a token amount so they can list it on the label.

~30 sec Format explanation, honest

52 / 70

Personal

The Taste

Bear mixing the product live. Drinks it. Real reaction.

[Scoops powder, mixes it in a glass, takes a drink.]

I'm not going to pretend it tastes like a milkshake. It doesn't.

It tastes like what it is. Honey, vanilla, and a whole lot of real food underneath it.

We tried about fifteen different flavour profiles before we landed on this one. The brief was: it has to taste good enough that you'll have it every day, but it can't be loaded with sugar or sweeteners to get there.

Organic honey powder and vanilla bean. That's it. No sucralose. No stevia. No artificial flavourings.

It's good. It's not dessert. But it's good. And honestly, after a week it just becomes your morning. You don't think about it.

~25 sec Honest taste review

53 / 70

Education

Iron

Bear to camera. Quick. One idea.

Iron deficiency is one of the most common nutrient deficiencies in the world. Especially in women.

And most people try to fix it with iron tablets. Which are notorious for causing stomach problems, constipation, nausea. Because the body struggles to process synthetic iron.

The iron in liver is heme iron. It's the form your body evolved to absorb. It's gentler on the stomach and far more effective.

One scoop of Modern Savage contains grass-fed bovine liver. Real iron. From real food. In a form that actually works.

If you've ever struggled with iron supplements, this is worth knowing about.

~20 sec Nutrient spotlight, women's health angle

54 / 70

Founder

The Hard Part

Bear to camera. Honest, no polish. Founder reality.

People think the hard part of building a brand is making the product. It's not. The formula took time but we knew what we wanted.

The hard part is convincing people it's real.

Because the supplement industry has spent decades making claims it can't back up. And now when someone comes along and says "this is genuinely different," people's first reaction is: yeah, sure, that's what they all say.

I get it. I would think the same thing.

So we're just going to keep doing this. Showing the label. Explaining the ingredients. Being honest about what we know and what we don't know. And hopefully, over time, that builds something worth trusting.

~25 sec Founder vulnerability

55 / 70

Kids Family

Colostrum, Simply

Bear to camera. Explaining something to another parent.

Colostrum is the first thing a mother produces for a newborn. Before breast milk. It's packed with antibodies and immune compounds designed to give a baby the strongest start possible.

We put bovine colostrum in the Kids Blend because the research on it is compelling. It supports gut lining integrity, immune function, and growth in children.

Quick thing: it does come from milk, so it contains a milk allergen. We declare that clearly on the label and in everything we put out. If your child has a dairy allergy, this one isn't right for them. Full transparency.

For everyone else, it's an ingredient I wish I'd known about years ago.

~25 sec Honest education with allergen flag

56 / 70

Honest Talk

What It Won't Do

Bear to camera. This is the most honest script in the batch. No selling at all.

Let me tell you what Modern Savage won't do.

It won't fix a bad diet. If you're eating rubbish, a scoop of powder in the morning isn't going to save you.

It won't give you energy by lunch if you slept four hours. It's not caffeine. It's nutrition.

It won't make you feel different overnight. Real nutrition builds over weeks, not hours. Anyone who tells you otherwise is lying.

What it will do is give your body the raw materials it needs to work properly. Organs, protein, gut health, micronutrients. In forms the body recognises.

But it's a piece of the puzzle. It's not the whole puzzle. I'd never tell you otherwise.

~25 sec Managing expectations honestly

57 / 70

Personal Education

Travelling with It

Bear packing a bag or in a hotel room. Casual. Real context.

One thing I've noticed is how much easier this makes travelling.

I used to pack a bag of supplements when I went anywhere. Individual bottles, capsules rolling around at the bottom of my kit bag, half of them probably expired.

Now it's just the bag. One scoop in water wherever I am. Hotel room, airport lounge, the back of a Land Rover somewhere.

Sounds like a small thing but when you're on the road a lot, it matters. Because the days you need good nutrition most are the days you're least likely to get it. Early flights, skipped meals, jet lag.

Having everything in one bag means I actually take it. Every day. That consistency is where the real benefit is.

~25 sec Real-life use case

58 / 70

Education

The Label Test

Bear at a table. Two products in front of him (Modern Savage and a generic supplement, label facing camera).

I want to show you something. It takes two minutes and it'll change how you buy supplements forever.

Pick up any supplement you own. Turn it over. Look for two things.

First: does it say "proprietary blend" anywhere? If it does, that means they're not telling you how much of each ingredient is in the product. They're allowed to list the ingredients but not the amounts. Think about that.

Second: look at the source of each ingredient. If it just says "vitamin A" or "iron," it's almost certainly synthetic. If it says the actual food source, like bovine liver or acerola cherry, it's whole-food derived.

[Turns the Modern Savage bag around.]

Every ingredient. Every dose. Every source. That's what a label should look like.

~35 sec Teach them to read labels

59 / 70

Family

Personal

What It Means to Own It

Bear at home. End of day. Quiet. The last thing he'd say about it.

Owning something means you can't walk away from it.

If this was a licensing deal and something went wrong, I could step back. Issue a statement. Distance myself. That's how most celebrity brands work.

I can't do that with Modern Savage. My name is on it because I built it. My family's name. My son's name.

If the product isn't good enough, that's on me. If someone has a bad experience, that's on me. If the ingredients don't do what we say they do, that's on me.

That's terrifying, honestly. But it's also why I trust it more than anything I've ever been involved with. Because there's nowhere to hide.

~25 sec Deepest founder vulnerability

60 / 70

Honest Talk Personal Founder

Just Try It

Bear to camera. Relaxed. Closing the conversation, not making a pitch.

I'm not going to sit here and tell you this will change your life. I don't know your life.

What I know is my life. And in my life, eating this way for thirty years has been the single best health decision I've made. Better than any training programme. Better than any diet I've tried. Better than any supplement I've ever bought.

Modern Savage is just that nutrition in a scoop. Organs, protein, gut health, real food. Nothing else.

If you're curious, try it. Give it a month. See how you feel. If it's not for you, fair enough.

But if you've been looking for one simple thing you can trust, this is what I'd give you. Because it's what I give my family.

~30 sec The quiet close

Batch 3: Family-to-Family

Built entirely around "we." Our family built this for other families. We're in this together. Nobody is being sold to. Everybody is being invited in. Bear speaks as a dad, a husband, a son. Film warm: kitchen tables, garden, morning light.

---

61 / 70

Family-to-Family Community

Our Family, Your Family

Bear at the kitchen table. Morning. Warm light. Both products on the counter behind him. Feels like he's talking to another parent over a cup of tea.

We built Modern Savage around our kitchen table.

Me, Jesse, Shara. Talking about what we actually wanted for our family. What we wished existed. What we'd been looking for and couldn't find.

And we realised that if we were asking these questions, other families probably were too. Families who care about what goes into their bodies. Who read labels. Who want one thing they can trust rather than a shelf full of maybes.

So we made it. Our family built this for families like ours. Same values. Same standards. Same refusal to settle for rubbish.

If that sounds like where you're at, come join us. We'd love to have you.

modernsavage.shop

~30 sec The core invitation

62 / 70

Family-to-Family

The Same Counter

Bear in the kitchen making both scoops. Morning routine. Kids audible or visible in the background if possible. Handheld, phone-quality.

[Bear scoops the Adult Blend into one glass, the Kids Blend into another. Stirs both.]

This is what our morning looks like. Every morning. Same counter. Same routine. My scoop, their scoop.

And that's what we wanted for every family using this. One brand that the whole household can share. Not one product for dad and a different brand for the kids. One philosophy. One set of ingredients we all trust. One counter.

We're all trying to do the same thing, right? Give our families the best we can. We just wanted to make that a little bit simpler.

modernsavage.shop

~20 sec Shared morning ritual

63 / 70

Community

We All Want the Same Thing

Bear walking outdoors. Reflective. Talking to camera like a friend walking beside him.

Something I've learnt from talking to thousands of people over the years is that most of us want the same thing.

We want to feel well. We want our families to be healthy. We want to know what we're putting in our bodies. And we want to stop feeling like every health product on the shelf is trying to confuse us or take our money.

That's it. Those are pretty simple things to want.

Modern Savage was built around exactly those things. Real food. Full transparency. Something the whole family can use. Something we can all understand.

We're not trying to build the biggest supplement brand in the world. We're trying to build one that families actually trust. Starting with ours. Hopefully including yours.

modernsavage.shop

~30 sec Shared values

64 / 70

Family-to-Family Community

Built Together

Bear to camera. Close-up. Quiet pride. Like telling a friend about something his family made.

Modern Savage is a family project in the truest sense.

Jesse runs the business. He's the one in the detail, questioning every ingredient, pushing every decision. Shara was the one who said the kids' product had to be just as good as the adult one. Our nutritionists are people we handpicked because we trust their judgement the way we trust family.

We made every call together. What goes in, what stays out, what we're willing to compromise on. Which is nothing, by the way.

And now we're inviting other families to be part of it. Same product we give our kids. Same scoop we have every morning. From our family to yours.

modernsavage.shop

~25 sec Collective build story

65 / 70

Community

Join Us

Bear outdoors. Golden hour. Open, warm, invitational. This is the community-building script.

We're at the beginning of something here. And that's the exciting part.

Modern Savage is brand new. We haven't been around for years building a reputation. We're right at the start. Which means the people who join us now are the people who shape what this becomes.

We want to hear from families. What's working. What could be better. What else we should be thinking about. Because this was never meant to be a brand that talks at people. It's meant to be a brand that's built with the people who use it.

Our family started this. But we want it to belong to every family that shares these values.

Come be part of it.

modernsavage.shop

~25 sec Early community invitation

66 / 70

Family-to-Family

Every Family Is Different

Bear at home. Natural. Talking about real families, not ideal ones.

Our family is a bit chaotic. I'll be honest. Mornings are loud. Nobody can find their shoes. Someone's always running late.

And I know every family has their own version of that. We're all just trying to hold it together and do our best.

That's who Modern Savage is for. Not the family that has it all figured out. The family that's doing its best and wants one less thing to worry about.

One scoop for the adults. One scoop for the kids. Same brand. Same trust. Thirty seconds and it's done, whatever else the morning throws at us.

We built this for real family life. The messy, loud, wonderful reality of it.

modernsavage.shop

~25 sec Imperfect families welcome

67 / 70

Family-to-Family Community

The Standard We Set

Bear to camera. Warm but with quiet conviction. Kitchen or sitting room.

When we were building the formula, Jesse said something that stuck with me. He said: "If we wouldn't give it to our kids, we don't put it in."

And that became the rule for everything. Every ingredient had to pass that test. Every dose. Every source.

It's a high bar. It made the process harder and more expensive. But it meant that when we finally had the product in our hands, we knew it was right.

That's the standard. The same thing we give our children is the same thing we're offering to yours. No different version. No cheaper option. One standard for everyone.

From our family to yours. That's the promise.

modernsavage.shop

~25 sec Shared standard

68 / 70

Community

We're Learning Too

Bear walking or sitting outside. Humble. Open. No performance.

We don't have all the answers. I want to be clear about that.

We've built what we believe is the best whole-food supplement we can make right now. But nutrition science moves forward. New research comes out. We learn things.

And when we do, we'll improve the formula. We'll share what we've learnt. We'll be honest about what's changed and why.

That's the deal with Modern Savage. We're not a brand that launches a product and walks away. We're a family that's on this journey with everyone who joins us.

We'll keep learning. We'll keep getting better. And we'll bring everyone with us.

modernsavage.shop

~25 sec Humility and shared journey

69 / 70

Family-to-Family

What We All Deserve

Bear at the kitchen table. Both products in front of him. Gentle, direct, parent-to-parent.

Every family deserves to know what's in their food. Every family deserves nutrition that's real, that's transparent, that the body actually recognises.

That shouldn't be a luxury. It shouldn't be complicated. It shouldn't require a science degree to understand the label.

We built Modern Savage because we believe family nutrition can be simple, honest, and genuinely good. One product for the adults. One for the kids. Everything listed. Everything real.

We're a family that cares about this stuff. And we know we're not the only ones. If this matters to your family too, we made this for you.

modernsavage.shop

~25 sec Shared belief, gentle invitation

70 / 70

Family-to-Family Community

From Us to You

Bear at home. End of day light. The warmest, most personal script in the batch. This is Bear as a dad talking to other parents.

I spend a lot of my life doing big things. Climbing, jumping out of planes, surviving in places most people wouldn't choose to go.

But the thing I care about most is small. It's breakfast. It's what my kids eat before school. It's whether the people I love are getting the nutrition their bodies need.

That's where Modern Savage lives. Not in the big moments. In the small ones. The morning scoop. The daily routine. The quiet knowledge that we've done something good for the people we care about.

Our family built this for your family. Same product. Same care. Same refusal to compromise on what matters.

We hope you'll join us.

modernsavage.shop

~30 sec The warm close

Confidential. For BGV internal use.